

September 1 is
Disaster Prevention Day

Prepare for Wind and Water Damage

Typhoons are common in September. In the past, heavy rain and strong winds have caused extensive damage in the city, such as building collapses, flooded roads, landslides, and prolonged power outages.

It is important to take appropriate evacuation measures to protect your life.

When a heavy rain or typhoon forecast is issued, make sure to gather information in advance and learn the appropriate measures so you can quickly take action when necessary.

The point of evacuation information

Evacuation means avoiding danger to ensure your safety. If you are already in a safe location, there is no need to go to an evacuation site. However, alerts are not always issued since it may be impossible to accurately assess the situation during a disaster. If you feel unsafe, take action to protect your life without waiting for an alert.

Key Point 3 Obtain accurate information: Means of communication during disasters

The city uses the disaster prevention public address system and other means to disseminate information during a disaster. However, there is a possibility that these communication channels are affected by the disaster, so make sure to use multiple channels to obtain information.

Emergency Alert Emails (registration not required)

A notification containing critical information in the event of a life-threatening situation that is sent simultaneously by mobile carriers to mobile phones in a specific area.

Keep the Three Points in Mind to Create a "My Timeline" at Home

"My Timeline" is a personal evacuation plan organized chronologically to suit your family structure and local conditions.
